

A Call for Authors

Introducing a New Book Series from CRC Press

Advances in Police Theory and Practice

AIMS AND SCOPE:

This cutting-edge series is designed to support strong collaboration between researchers and practitioners in police work. We are especially interested in volumes that focus on the nexus between research and practice, with the end goal of implementing innovative police programs. We will consider collections of expert contributions as well as individually authored works. Books in this series will be marketed internationally to both academic and professional audiences. This series seeks to —

- Bridge the gap in knowledge between theory and practice regarding who the police are, what they do, and how they maintain order, administer laws, and serve their communities
- Improve cooperation between those who are active in the field and those who are involved in academic research so as to facilitate the application of innovative police work

The series especially encourages the contribution of works co-authored by police practitioners and researchers that will highlight a particular subject from both points of view and offer suggestions for applications of the research. We are also interested in works comparing policing approaches and methods from one nation to another, examining such areas as the policing of international states, democratic policing, policing and social minorities, preventive policing, investigation, patrolling and response, and drug enforcement. Manuscripts should be between 200 and 600 pages. If you have a proposal for an original work or for a contributed volume, please be in touch.
