International Police Executive Symposium

The International Police Executive Symposium (IPES) brings police researchers and practitioners together to facilitate cross-cultural, international and interdisciplinary exchanges for the enrichment of the policing profession. It encourages discussions and writing on challenging topics of contemporary importance through an array of initiatives including conferences and publications. Founded in 1994 by Dilip K. Das, Ph.D., the IPES is a registered not-for-profit organization. It is funded by the benefaction of institutional supporters and sponsors that host IPES events around the world.

The IPES' major annual initiative is a four-day meeting on specific issues relevant to the policing profession. Past meeting themes have covered a broad range of topics from police education to corruption. Meetings are organized by the IPES in conjunction with sponsoring organizations in a host country. To date, meetings have been held in North America, Europe, Asia, and the Middle East. The IPES' annual meetings bring together ministers of interior and justice, police commissioners and chiefs, members of the academia representing world-renowned institutions, and many more of criminal justice elites from over 60 countries throughout the world. The meetings facilitate interaction and exchange of ideas and opinions on all aspects of policing. The agenda is structured to encourage dialogue in both formal and informal settings.

Compilations of selected papers from each meeting have been published or are in stages of publication preparation. Closely associated with the IPES is the Police Practice & Research: An International Journal (PPR). This journal is committed to highlighting current, innovative police practices from all over the world; providing opportunities for exchanges between police practitioners and researchers; reporting the state of public safety, internationally; focusing on successful practices that build partnerships between police practitioners and communities; as well as drawing attention to other successful police practices in relation to maintaining order, enforcing laws, and serving the community.

Host

The meeting will be hosted by Commissioner John Rizzo, Malta Police. Participants receive full hospitality gratis including accommodations, meals, sightseeing, cultural entertainment and transportation to and from the airport. All local arrangements, including assistance before or after the meeting can be made through the Meeting Coordinator, Mintie Das, IPES.

Call for Papers

Participants are encouraged to prepare a paper of approximately 25 pages in English discussing the theme from their country's unique perspective. Papers should describe and analyze the responses adopted by a country's policing system to the new challenges, present original information and data, and summarize the lessons learned so far by each police service in this field. Interested individuals should submit an abstract ASAP. Final papers of accepted proposals are due by March 1, 2010. For details, please contact Dr. Dilip Das at dilipkd@aol.com

Panels

Roundtable and panel proposals are welcome. They must deal directly with at least a few of the issues related above. Such proposals should comprise a balance of researchers and practitioners, pay attention to geographic distribution, and theory and practice.

All sessions conducted in English.

Dress in business attire.

Participants expected to attend all sessions.
